By a departing light

We see acuter, quite,

Than by a wick that stays.

There's something in the flight

That clarifies the sight

And decks the rays

(Emily Dickinson)

the piece at large is slow, within this range any tempo; the piece at large is soft, within this range any dynamics; single sounds and any groups of sounds; any breaks, any pauses. natural harmonics: roman numerals indicate the string, arabic numerals indicate the partial number. very high natural partials come into being nearly as pure noise. the high amount of noise and the difficult intonation are welcome. cross within a circle: low pressure of the bow. tones within the distance of a second (one diamond-shaped) are played with different pressure of the string, the note as a whole one is played with full finger pressure, the diamond-shaped note with a light finger pressure. cross notes "molto sul tasto". the arrow means any change of the bow between the strings in any order for rather a while. becoming ever quieter and calmer; falling more and more into silence.
